

who washed up on the improbable shores of China, and Shanghai's role in their salvation, is a unique story and one which deserves recognition. We especially want to make this historic document available to all those with a personal connection to the Shanghai survivors and/or to those interested in their history. The fiftieth anniversary of the end of World War II seems a fitting time to publish it.

Readers of this small volume can assist us by spreading the word of its existence and by making the publisher's address known to others interested in this little-known facet of World War II's history, the Jewish refugees of Shanghai. For further information, write to:

Old China Hand Press

P.O. Box 54750

Northpoint P.O.

Hong Kong

or

Tess Johnston

1375 Huai Hai Zhong Lu

Apt. 14-B

Shanghai 200031, China

Shanghai, August 1995